

To Whom it may Concern,

This letter of recommendation for Phuc Lam Doan comes from his English teacher in the Philippines. My name is David Alexander Palahnuk from the USA. I have a rich history of entrepreneurialism, sales and management. I also have had the lifelong goal of perfecting my English writing and speaking skill levels since my early 20's and have been hired to type out manuscripts, essays, dissertations, plus have also proofread and edited countless documents and been hired out for voice-overs and as a vocal actor.

I decided to start teaching English pronunciation and accent training years ago, because it had always been my hobby, and I found that I knew how to teach it better than others. I really believe in my students and know that learning languages is an innate ability that we never lose. I believe that those whose desire is stronger than their doubts must succeed, so long as they don't give up, and if they keep their focus. Forrest consistently shows that he knows how to focus and how to not give up until he reaches his goals.

I have come to know Forrest since early June 2019. He came, as one of the most enthusiastic students I've ever had, to the English-speaking academy that I taught, on and off, at for several years. He has remained one of my favorite students because of his passion for how he pursues and for his unfailing commitment to his goals.

He quickly became a model student for, especially our Vietnamese, students, in that he took the very challenging goal of improving his English accent - to sound less Vietnamese and more like a native speaker - to the highest levels. I could see his tenacity, focus and resolve was unsurpassed, and regardless of the difficulty, he never lost his focus, nor his enthusiasm.

Even now, he continues to study with me, and consistently displays an even temperament, even though he sometimes is especially hard on himself because he always reaches for high levels of improvement. He sets his own personal achievement benchmark higher than most of my students do.

I realized early on that Forrest could be successful at whatever ambition he might choose to pursue. In class, he proved to be an excellent communicator and even became my unofficial assistant in many of my classes, because he was so involved in the learning process.

Before I knew that he had a history of sales, I had thought he would be an excellent salesperson or sales manager, because his bright attitude, excellent communications skills and high energy levels were particularly contagious and motivational for his fellow students. He became the unofficial head of the Vietnamese students at the English academy, because no other student was more enthusiastic as he.

If I were in need of a sales manager or team member or any other position that involves communicating with customers and his fellow employees, I would hire Forrest in an instant. He's really a powerhouse of energy, enthusiasm, positivity and any company that hires him is wise to do so.

Sincerely,

David Alexander Palahnuk
